

Student International Neuropsychological Society (SINS)

The mission of the Students of the International Neuropsychological Society is to foster the professional development of students of neuropsychological sciences by promoting student contributions to the study of brain-behavioral relationships, addressing the academic and professional needs of students, and encouraging student leadership within the INS.

Background

At the 38th annual INS meeting in Acapulco in 2010, the INS Board organized a meeting to solicit comments from students and trainees about how to better serve associate members and increase their involvement. As a result of this meeting, a student-run organization was formed with specific goals to address student and trainee professional development needs, foster student contributions to neuropsychological science, and provide opportunities for involvement and leadership within the INS.

Tell us what you think!

You are an important part of building SINS! We invite you to provide your comments and suggestions about the goals and objectives of SINS.

Complete the survey at https://byu.qualtrics.com/SE?SID=SV\_6KyQesgv3o5TXVy

Student Contact: Sommer Thorgusen

E-mail: sommer.thorgusen@hsc.utah.edu