About INS

The International Neuropsychological Society (INS) is a non-profit, professional organization dedicated to promoting the collaborative, interdisciplinary, and global study of brain-behavior relationships with emphasis on science, education, and the applications of scientific knowledge.

About INS Meetings

INS holds two meetings each year, including its Annual Meeting in North America every February and its Mid-Year Meeting internationally every July. Each meeting offers up to four days of scientific programming and continuing education workshops. Both meetings are open to members, non-members, professionals and students alike. Attendees represent neuropsychology and a variety of other disciplines.

Since it began in 1973, the INS Annual Meeting has become one of the premier scientific and educational meeting venues for international neuropsychology. Over the past three years, the Annual Meeting has averaged approximately 2000 attendees per year; and the New York City meeting should break our previous top attendance record of 2100.

The INS Mid-Year Meeting began in 1977 and has been held in a city outside of North America every year since. With attendance averaging between 400 to 800, the Mid-Year meeting is a highly anticipated event on the international scene.

Who Are INS Members?

Founded in 1967, INS now has more than 4100 active members from more than 60 different countries. INS members represent every U.S. state, including DC, and Puerto Rico, and eight Canadian provinces.

INS members represent cognitive and clinical neuropsychologists, psychologists of other disciplines, neurologists, psychiatrists, speech-language pathologists, and related specialties. They include esteemed scientists and clinicians from the world’s most prestigious universities and institutions, as well as students and trainees just beginning their careers.
Neuropsychology is a melting pot, at the crossroads of neuroscience and behavioral health. To fully understand brain health and illness, we need to consider both neurobiological and psychological processes. We also need to consider developmental factors and the various environmental contexts within which individuals function. Drawing on these ideas, the theme for the 2019 Annual Meeting in New York City is: Embracing the Biopsychosocial Melting Pot.

We couldn’t be more excited to be meeting in NYC, its own melting pot of people and cultures. We hope you’ll join us for a stellar scientific program and the virtually endless arts, cultural, and social opportunities that the Big Apple has to offer. – Michael Kirkwood, 2019 INS Program Committee Chair

Keynote Speakers for the 2019 conference include: Dr. Keith Yeates, INS President; Dr. Judy Illes, internationally recognized authority in neuroscience and biomedical ethics; Dr. Rebecca Saxe, groundbreaking neuroscientist studying the neural basis of social cognition; Dr. Tim Hohman, leading cognitive neuroscientist examining novel markers of Alzheimer’s disease risk and resilience; Dr. Sandrine Thuret, global leader in environmental and molecular regulatory mechanisms of adult neurogenesis.

The Birch Memorial Lecture will be delivered by Dr. Paul Bloom, world renowned for his provocative research on moral and social development across the lifespan. The 3rd annual Edith Kaplan Memorial Lecture will be delivered by Dr. Adrian Owen, Canada Excellence Research Chair in Cognitive Neuroscience and pioneer in the use of neuroimaging to examine brain function in minimally conscious states.

It may be changed from time to time at the discretion of the Board in consultation with or at the request of the INS Executive Director. The character of the exhibits is subject to the approval of the Executive Director. INS reserves the right to refuse applications on concerns of not meeting standards required or expected, as well as the right to curtail advertisements, exhibits or parts of exhibits that reflect against the character of the meeting.
